LITTLE FOLKS VS. THE BIG FOLKS.

Dr. Vincent Tells Parents and Teachers Something About Both.

HIS LECTURE A STRONG ONE.

How the Bad and the Goody-Goody Children Will Get Together, and The Lesson it Teaches.

One of the most interesting and practical lectures recently given in this city, was that delivered last night, in Barratt hall by Dr. George E. Vincent and by a judicious system of coaching and inspiration to effort, the childish comprehension may be made to entertain thoughts and aspirations that develope the finer qualities of womanhood and manhood as they grow up and which in the end may result in the highest and the noblest fruition.

Dr. Vincent urged upon his listeners the fact that "we must face the child life and its facts. The attitude of the teacher towards the child determines the attitude of children to children. Teachers should enter into the various interests of their pupils and thoroughly understand their thoughts and motives."

The doctor is lecturing this afternoon at the university on "How the Land Moulds a People." He speaks again this evening, in Barratt hall, on "Education and Efficiency."

CACHE COUNTY NOW.

Adopts Resolutions to Aid in Arid Land Reclamation.

Cache county people will unite with those of other counties in pushing the government plan for irrigation extension in Utah, and at a meeting held at Lewiston, Saturday evening, the following resolutions were adopted:

"Whereas, The plan devised by the on "Children vs Grownups." The Arid Land Reclamation Fund commis-speaker was happy in his illustrations sion of Utah for the betterment of the and comparisons, and the facts he water supply for Cache, Salt Lake and wished to impress upon his audience were made without hesitancy. His idea was to show the mistake made by grown up people in attempting to inject upon the child mind, ideas that properly belong to maturity, and before the youthful comprehension is sufficiently developed to grasp them. Dr. ficiently developed to grasp them. Dr. Vincent's idea was that the plans of childhood should be sympathized with by parents and older people and their ideals entered into with sympathetic appreciation and co-operation in development. This will gradually build up and mature the child mind in a healthy growth, and avoid those interferences with the natural progress of youthful evolution that are so often hurtful, if not positively injurious. Dr. prtful, if not positively injurious. Dr Vincent explained, what "goody-goody" meant. He said it was where a child attempted to take upon itself the man-ners of much older people, and which were considered much in advance of its age. This is often the occasion of banter and ridicule among children who find one or more of their number acting

The speaker called attention to the The speaker called attention to the fact that some children are considered totally deprayed, a view that is held by disgruntled bachelors mostly. On the other extreme there are some children who are considered paragons of perfection, incapable of wrong doing, a view held mostly by doting manmas, who are also apt to take the opposite view of their neighbors' children. Then there is a third theory, that of evoluthere is a third theory, that of evolution generally leading to a let alone dectrine on the ground that a child will build up its own character. There is also a fourth theory, or doctrine, a sort of mixture of all the above three, holding that a child is a bnudle of poten-

Dr. Vincent related an instance of the perfection theory, where a man who lived in the same block that he did, kept his boy shut up in a large back yard around which was a strong wire fence, the idea being that this seclusion would keep the perfect youth from associating with the bad doys of the neighborhood. to his astonishment one day, this man To his assonishment one day, this had found out that his angel of a boy had succeeded in getting the wickedest boy on the street into the yard and afterengaging in a free for all fight with him, had thrown the bad boy down and him, had thrown the bad boy down and was "pummeling the stuffing out of him." The speaker also entertained the audience by telling how his folks had insisted on his playing with a little girl named Beulah. Beulah was a goodygoody child who was never known to do anything wrong, and was most delightfully proper in everything. Now the Vincent youth did not consider himself so proper, and he disliked Buelah and her prudish ways. That made no difference, however, with his motherhe must play with Buelah. The enforced acquaintance had such an effect on the young man that ever since he has even detested the hymn "Buelah Land."

Dr. Vincent believed in letting youth-ful spirits vent themselves and that older people ought to be charitable and bear with infantile explosions. He said he was playing locomotive once in the house to the annoyance of a visitor who was calling on his mother. The visitor finally became tired of the racket, and stopping the boy asked what he was playing. "I'm playing locomotive," was the prempt reply. "Why don't you learn to play cow?" was asked. The boy stood still in expectation of having boy stood still in expectation of having some new and interesting game explained, and quickly asked, "What sort of a game is that?" "Why lay down and chew your cud," was the answer. The boy's disgust remains to this day. Children are conscious of being children said the speaker. They realize that there is a natural antagonism between the ideas of children and those of grown up neonle. It is a mistake to impose there is a natural antagonism the ideas of children and those of grown up people. It is a mistake to impose ready made ideas on children, and which they feel is an imposition. It is strength and endurance, as thousands annually testify. relation with them bring them to her for comfort and consolation. She sees the dangers in their young lives and draws them to her by cords of love, and entering into their childish experiences as she does, how quickly and firmly she holds their lasting confidence. Dr. Vincent remarked that college boys have their ideas as fully distinct and reculiar to their age and experience as peculiar to their age and experience as children; and the thing with them, as with children, is to get into their esteem and confidence, and thus instil into their minds the truth and the advantage of striving, reaching up after noble and lofty ideals. This acts as a stimulant to alm for higher things, ORATORICAL CONTEST.

Outcome Was Very Close Among the All Hallows Participants.

The elocutionary contest last evening at All Hallows college was a very successful affair, and the contestants did so well that the judges were unable to agree in the senior contest, and had to decide the matter by lot. The occasion was made more interesting by the presence of Archbishop Redwood of Wellington and Bishop Scanlan, and the hall was well filled with the many patrons and friends of the institution. The result of the lot drawing in the senior speaking was the awarding of the gold nedal to Martin Curran of Hagerman, Ida., with Julius Schmidt of Sandy as a very good second. In announcing the result, Judge Powers made a neal speech, congratulating the boys and the faculty of the institution on the execuence of the training given there, and the necessity of learning to be good speakers in public was set forth by the
